A NOTE ON THE BIBLIOGRAPHY

This bibliography on new reproductive technologies has been compiled by the Manitoba Advisory Council on the Status of Women, and is intended to be used as an information resource. It is by no means a comprehensive bibliography on this very complex topic. Several bibliographies which have been prepared by other organizaations and individuals are also appended.

A double asterisk () next to any item indicates that the Advisory Council has a copy of this item. The Advisory Council also maintains a vertical file system of newspaper clippings on new reproductive technologies, which is not included in this bibliography.

We hope that this information will be helpful to all those who are interested in learning more about new reproductive technologies.

DONCHIN, Anne, Reproductive Technology and Moral Responsibility: Redefining Parenthood, paper presented at the Tenth International Wittgenstein Symposium in Austria, August 1985.

This is a fascinating philosophical paper that deals with the way in which the new RT's are turning conception, birth and parenting into programmed entities. What does this mean for children and parents?

* On file with CRIAW - cannot be circulated without permission.

HORNSTEIN, Francie, "Children by Donor Insemination: A New Choice for Lesbians", in Test-Tube Women, pp. 373-381.

A lesbian writes of her own decision to become pregnant through AID and also of some of the broader social issues involved in this use of AID.

INCE, Susan, "Inside the Surrogate Industry" in Test-Tube Women, pp. 99-116.

This is a first-hand account of Ince's experience in applying to an agency to become a surrogate mother. She analyzes surrogacy from a radical feminist perspective. Essential reading, but few references.

KLEIN, Renate Duelli, "Doing It Ourselves: Self-Insemination" in Test-Tube Women, pp. 382-390.

This article describes the experiences of a London, England group of lesbians who do self-insemination. It also deals with the question of what type of families their children will be raised in.

MURPHY, Julie, "Egg Farming and Women's Future" in Test-Tube Women, pp. 68-75.

Murphy describes how the new RT's have led to the commodification of women's eggs. What does the practice of egg-farming (now only practiced on a relatively small scale) mean for women's lives and our control of our reproduction?

a PAMPHLET, "Reproductive Wrongs: Male Power and the New Reproductive Technologies", 1985- available from Sisterwrite, 190 Upper St., London NI.

It is hard to imagine a more radical critique fo RT's than this one. It was written by a group of lesbian feminists in England who were forced to leave their names off for reasons of potential libel suits! Consequently, there is no author. It is extremely polemical. Although I agree with most of the content, even I find the style a bit much. It does deal briefly with egg donation.

PILON, Robyn, "Conception Without Sex", Healthsharing, Vol. 6 (4), 1985, pp. 21-24.

One of the few (maybe the only, in fact) articles on IVF in Canada. She talked to Canadian doctors and gives a few Canadian Statistics. Contains a brilliant and insightful quote from the famous sociologist Linda Williams (p. 23)!! See Feminist Perspectives No. 6.

ROWLAND, Robyn, "Reproductive Technologies: The Final Solution to the Woman Question?" in Test-Tube Women, pp. 356-369.

This is an excellent overview of RT's and how they will lead to a lessening of what little control we now have over our own lives.

SUTHERLAND, Brigitte, "Birth Technology: The Evolution Revolution", pp. 31-35.

This is one of the few Canadian publications on RT's. It deals briefly with the whole issue of male control, IVF, AID, surrogacy, sex selection, legal control, and the connection between RT's and the agenda of the Right (Andrea Dworkin in "Right-Wing Women" also talks about this.

WINTERS, Barbara, "Engineered Conception: The New Parenthood" in Jan Zimmerman (ed.) The Technological Woman: Interfacing with Tomorrow. New York: Praeger Publishers, 1983, pp. 221-238.

This Contains a brief description of AID, surrogacy, IVF, sex selection and access issues. There is not much political analysis, but it is a useful overview of how each technology works and the possible permutations and combinations.

ACHILLES, Rona, "New Age Procreation", Healthsharing, Vol. 6(4): pp. 10-14, 1985.

A very good article, she deals briefly (p. 13) with surrogacy, but mostly talks about all RT's, social issues, sex selection etc. She talks about what the children of these technologies might be like. How will they be affected?

ALBURY, Rebecca, "Who Owns the Embryo?" in Test-Tube Women, pp. 54-67.

This is a powerful article which convinced me that my concerns about the social construction of parenthood motivation in women seeking IVF were "on target". Albury skillfully describes how IVF is a political issue, and that this technology arises out of an unequal balance of power between men and women.

ARDITTI, Rita; DUELLI KLEIN, Renate; and MINDEN, Shelley, Test-Tube Women: What Future for Motherhood? London: Pandora Press, 1984.

This is the first feminist collection of articles on RT's and should be considered an important source. It contains articles on all RT's.

CADDICK, Alison, "Feminism Under Glass - The Reproductive Technologies Debate", Scarlet Woman, Spring 1984, No. 19, pp. 11-17.*

Caddick examines the logic behind the positions some feminists have taken toward AID and IVF by examining the work of Barbara Wishart and Robyn Rowland. Highly theoretical.

COREA, Gena The Mother Machine: Reproductive Technologies from Artificial

* This is an Australian publication.

Insemination to Artificial Wombs, Toronto: Fitzhenry & Whiteside Ltd., 1985.

One of the scariest books ever written, if you are a feminist. Corea discusses all the technologies in depth. Essential reading.

COREA, Genoveffa, "Egg Snatchers" in Test-Tube Women, pp. 37-51.

This article asks how doctors obtained the eggs needed to develop the new RT's, particularly IVF. Corea uncovers evidence that eggs were often taken from women without their knowledge or consent.
